President's Message...

When we think of war memorials here in the District the ones that most often come to mind are usually those most visited or covered by the press: The World War II Memorial, the Korean War Veterans Memorial, the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and the Women in Vietnam Memorial. Following closely behind these are the District of Columbia War Memorial, the African American Civil War Memorial, the Pershing Memorial, the First Division Monument, the Second Infantry Division WWI Memorial and the recently dedicated American Veterans Disabled for Life Memorial. All of the memorials and monuments have at least one thing in common: they are all physical, tangible venues, created from natural and manufactured materials and bronze and have been commissioned, designed, constructed, dedicated and, if properly maintained, will last forever.

But what of those intangible memorials to the men and women who have served in our armed forces... the firsthand accounts, the reminiscences, the memories many of which are too painful to recall? These accounts are memorialized in a very different manner: the Veterans History Project of the Library of Congress. Our May speaker, Robert Patrick, will describe for us how this project came to be, its importance in documenting the experiences of many American veterans and how you might contribute to it.

[Draft minutes of our last meeting for approval at the May 20, 2016 luncheon.]

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia (AOI) held the third luncheon meeting of its 151st year at the Capitol Skyline Hotel at Noon on Friday, April 15, 2016. President Bill Brown welcomed the attendees and called for approval of the minutes of the March 2016 meeting, which were printed in the April newsletter. After a motion made by Betty Walker and seconded by George Hutchinson, the minutes were approved as distributed.

New Members: Bill Brown presented the names of four proposed new members: Joan Beasley Gibala (Bill's “Cady” family cousin nominated by he and member John Cady); Julie Williams Cain of Tallapoosa, Georgia, her brother William G. None were present at today's luncheon. Mark Griffin moved for acceptance of the new members and the motion was seconded by John Cady and the four new members were approved.

Luncheon Report

Bill introduced first timer James McKay, Jr. and Paul Chestnut as a first timer as a member vs. being a guest. And there were a number of guests and their hosts: Peggy Bartlett had with her as her guest Paul Sonnenberg; Francine Berkowitz's guest was Judith Anderson; Laurea DiJoseph's guest was Connie Kerwin; and Ruth Cornelsen was Wally Rossmiller's guest.

Bill noted the passing of Austin Kiplinger's long-time friend Bonnie Nicholson and reminded those present of Nelson Rimensnyder's annual “No Vote, No Tax” protest scheduled for the east lawn of the Capitol at 5:30 today (April 15th).

Nelson offered a series of trivia questions for everyone's consideration:

Q: What occurred on April 15, 1791? A: The first Boundary Stone was placed at Jones' Point -- Thomas Neale provided the correct answer.

Q: In 1835 W.W. Corcoran married Louise Morris... how old was she? A: 17 years old – Connie Kerwin provided the answer.

Q: Before National Airport was established there was an existing airport named for a cabinet member in the Coolidge administration? A: Hoover – George Hutchinson answered.

Q: Where was Thompson's Restaurant located where Mary Church Terrell often attempted to eat? A: No one knew the answer which was on 14th Street so Paul Sonnenberg was provided the prize as a guest.

Today's guest, Stephen Grant, is a senior fellow at the Association for Diplomatic Studies and Training and author of "Collecting Shakespeare: The Story of Henry and Emily Folger." Even before Emily and Henry met, their lives were full of similar experiences and interests. They were from old, well to do families, were well educated and interested in many things. Emily was graduated from Vassar where she had been elected "President for Life" and Henry was graduated from Amherst where he played leadership roles in student life. After their wedding the young couple lived in Brooklyn. Emily and Henry had no children, but they were very much part of the New York scene, going to parties and visiting with relatives. The Folgers also began collecting books. Emily had earned a Master's Degree at Vassar in Shakespeare Studies so the couple was particularly drawn to Shakespeare.

Henry was obsessive about collecting books, he believed in quantity as well as quality. He liked to buy whole collections of books, not only for the pleasure of owning them, but also because he felt that the books were more valuable if he owned the only copies. Henry's purchases were always immediately labeled and stored. Storing them became quite a challenge, the couple's house was full of books and then they spread to leased storage buildings. By the end of their lives, the collection numbered 92,000 volumes.

Henry did work to support Emily and their book collection. Henry was John D. Rockefeller's right hand man. He got a law degree at Columbia University for his work with Rockefeller, but ended up running a number of businesses for him including Standard Oil (ESSO, then EXXON). Henry was fairly quiet in his jobs for Rockefeller but he did excellent work and was generously paid which helped him to maintain and enlarge his collection.

There were also books that were especially important to the Folgers. He was truly obsessed with Shakespeare Folios. These were books of Shakespeare's work. They had the words to the plays, sonnets, etc., but they also had illustrations and notes. Each folio was different, the creator interpreted Shakespeare's works in their own ways even altering the written words, adding and subtracting whatever they chose. Henry found these re-writes interesting and just as valuable as Shakespeare's other works.

As The Folgers began to age they realized that they had to make plans for the future of their beloved books. The Folgers considered leaving their books to a college or university but they were concerned that the schools would lock the books away for safe keeping and then the public would not have access to the books. They finally decided to develop a privately owned and operated Library that would available to everyone.

The Folgers began to look for an appropriate location for the library and all of the support buildings and services it needed. By accident, the Folgers discovered a block of houses near the Supreme Court, that they felt would work perfectly. Folger slowly bought up the houses on the block as they became available. It took 16 years for him to obtain all of the houses which were then torn down for the construction of the Library.

The Folger Library, located at 201 East Capitol St. is a wonderful building in form and function. The exterior is classical and the interior design is Tudor. The Building contains the Library, a reading room for study, reception areas for events and exhibits.

The Library also contains a small 260 seat theatre which was originally built for lectures and presentations, but is now also used for the production of Shakespeare's plays and experimental plays and music.

The Folger Library was dedicated on April 23, 1932. Only Emily Folger attended the Program. Henry had died in 1930, but their Library lives on and is remarkably like what they had envisioned decades before. The Folger continues to be administrated by Amherst College.

Bill Brown announced that the next regular luncheon will be held at the Capitol Skyline Hotel Friday, May 20 when the speaker will be Robert Patrick, who will discuss "The Library of Congress' Veterans History Project."
